I. Standing (Feb 2023, July 2022, July 2016, July 2013, Feb 2007, Feb 2004)

- 1) Bar Exam Tip: Many Constitutional Law essays begin with at least a brief discussion of standing. If standing is an issue, always start by stating the three general requirements of standing (injury, causation, redressability) before discussing any specialized problems of standing.
- 2) In order for a court to hear a case, the plaintiff needs to have “standing.” That is, the plaintiff needs to show an injury, causation, and redressability. If the plaintiff cannot show this, the court will not hear the case.
 - a) Injury in fact: it needs to be an actual or imminent personal injury—it cannot be hypothetical.
 - b) Causation: the harm must be fairly traceable to the defendant’s actions.
 - c) Redressability: the plaintiff needs to show that a favorable decision would eliminate the harm or remedy the injury.

- 3) Standing of organizations or associations (Feb 2023, July 2019, Feb 2007, Feb 2004)
 - a) An organization can sue for an injury to itself and can also sue for injuries to its members if a member or members have standing, the member’s injury is related to the purpose of the association, and individual members are not required to participate in the lawsuit.
 - b) *Ex.: The American Car Association is comprised of automobile motorists residing throughout the United States. One of its purposes is to promote free and unimpeded automobile travel. The organization has received numerous complaints about a new state law that prohibits its members from using radar detectors. The organization may bring a lawsuit on behalf of its members. There is a specific injury (impedes travel, makes radar detectors valueless), it is related to the organization’s purpose to promote free and unimpeded auto travel, and individual participation is not required in the lawsuit.
